Psychology & Human Services

Overview

More than ever, Australia is in need of skilled professionals who are able to develop, support and advance the social and psychological wellbeing of individuals and communities.

With USQ's broad range of degrees across Psychology and Human Services, you'll learn from industry experts and develop discipline specific skills in practical environments, where your work will have a meaningful impact on people's lives. Both Human Services and Psychology programs include professional placements. This work integrated learning will allow you to gain real life experience in diverse service, community and welfare settings.

You'll graduate industry-ready, with the majority of our programs having discipline-specific professional accreditation.
